Hon. Paul Kanjorski
 Chairman, Subcommittee on Capital Markets, Insurance and Government-Sponsored Enterprises
 Committee on Financial Services
 United States House of Representatives
 2188 Rayburn House Office Building
 Washington, DC 20515

Dear Chairman Kanjorski:

I received your April 13, 2010, letter regarding my March 18, 2010, testimony on insurance holding company supervision and have the following responses for you. First, with regard to your question "how many insurance operating entities are part of a holding company that is a) regulated by the state as an insurance operating company, b) regulated by a federal financial regulator; and c) not subject to financial regulatory supervision," please note my response is provided with the assistance of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners and is comprised of data from 50 state insurance departments and the District of Columbia.

Out of 6,695 risk-bearing insurance legal entities regulated and supervised by the state insurance departments, 5,220 (78%) insurance legal entities were affiliated with a holding company system (i.e., part of a group). The term "affiliated" is used because not all insurance legal entities are 100% owned or controlled by one single group; thus, several unaffiliated groups may have ownership interests in a single insurance legal entity.

Response (a): In responding to a) I understand the question to ask how many holding company systems include an insurance legal entity as the top parent entity which would therefore be regulated by the state as an insurance operating company. Please note that most insurance holding company systems are not structured in such a manner. Rather, there is typically a non-operating holding company or a non-financial operating entity as the top level company in the holding company system for various legal and tax purposes. An exception to this typical structure exists for insurers organized as mutual insurance companies. Nevertheless, out of the 5,220 insurance legal entities that are affiliated with a holding company system, 764 have an insurance legal entity as the top parent entity.

Response (b): In responding to b) I understand the question to concern those holding company systems where the Federal Reserve Board is the umbrella regulator. There are 105 insurance legal entities in holding company systems where the Federal Reserve Board is the umbrella regulator of the holding company system. Pursuant to the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, most federal regulators are functional regulators and thus are technically not considered the lead financial regulator of the holding company system; only the Federal Reserve Board is seen as the holding company regulator of Financial Holding Companies (FHCs).

With special regard to AIG, AIG became a unitary thrift holding company when the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) granted AIG approval to organize AIG Federal Savings Bank. The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act effectively prohibited the formation of similar uniform thrift holding companies after May 1999, but grandfathered existing uniform thrift holding companies or ones with pending applications. Thus, AIG has been subject to OTS regulation, examination, supervision and reporting requirements.

There are 50 risk-bearing insurance entities within the AIG holding company system overseen by the OTS.

Response (c): Of the 5,220 risk-bearing insurance legal entities considered, the remaining 4,301 insurance legal entities are in holding company systems where the "parent" entity of the group is not subject to Federal Reserve Board umbrella regulation or direct state functional regulation.

Attached to this correspondence is an Excel document prepared by the NAIC that provides the names of all of the risk bearing insurance legal entities within each category identified above. Please note that some state laws treat certain information on captive insurance legal entities as confidential; thus, some company information was not provided for those situations. Captives generally insure obligations within a group rather than market directly to the public.

Please let me know if you have any further questions.

Sincerely,

Ann M. Frohman
Nebraska Director of Insurance
Chair of the NAIC Group Solvency Issues (EX)
Working Group
